Response to Tomas Halik's Reading the Sign of the Times Peter Jonkers (Tilburg University, the Netherlands) One of the most important goals of Tomas Halik's work is to explore new ways for Christians to engage in a constructive dialogue with today's predominantly secular world. Although we lack accurate statistics about child mortality in the pre-industrial period, we do have evidence that in the 1660s, the mortality rate for children who died within 14 days of birth was as much as 30 per cent. Nearly all families suffered some premature death. Since all parents expected to bury some of their children, they found it difficult to invest in their newborn children.
